After 35 years on the 13th floor of the Regions Center in Little Rock, the Communications Group has moved in across the street from your Whispers correspondents into offices at 201 E. Markham St., offices that were previously home to Westrock Coffee Co.

President and founder Dan Cowling said the growing marketing firm is happy to be in the Heritage West Building, directly across Scott Street from Arkansas Business Publishing Group.

Cowling said the newly renovated space is equal in size to ComGroup's old offices, but is open, modern, industrial and designed for collaboration.

"For nearly four decades, the Communications Group has shared with our clients and our community an inspiring story of success," Cowling said. "It's a story about enterprise, growth, lots of change — and chock-full of characters. This move is a new chapter for our agency... ."

He called the new offices a central headquarters for serving clients, and "a modern space for a modern agency."
